INTRODUCTION.

In editing the text of the Mahâvagga, as the first instalment of a complete edition of the Pâli Vinaya Piṭaka, it may be well to say something as to the object of the undertaking. It is manifestly important that the entire text of the Buddhist Holy Writings should be made accessible to all who are desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of one of the most important historical phenomena of India, namely, Buddhism. There are, however, objections to the publication of the complete Tipiṭaka. Every one acquainted with the mode of expression employed in the earlier Buddhist works knows with what wearisome diffuseness the religious doctrines and ordinances are there set forth, how constantly the same thoughts and phrases are repeated, and how irritating to European readers is the excessive use of synonymous expressions. It may well be asked, therefore, whether it would not be sufficient to give mere extracts from the text, instead of the text itself, with all its formality and repetition? Those, however, who, being engaged in historical investigations, have been obliged to work from mere extracts, will know the advantage of being able to refer to the original works. When even those who made the extracts find in them an imperfect help, it is not surprising that to others they should be still less able to supply the place of the sources themselves. Every reader has his own questions to put to the original text, and will study it from his own particular point of view; hence it is impossible that extracts, however carefully made, can satisfy the requirements of every reader. Such extracts also, while showing but imperfectly what the text contains, show still less what it omits to mention. So, although many points may be cleared up even by so imperfect an acquaintance with the sources as is afforded by extracts, yet to those who wish to be complete masters of the subject, and must therefore study the smallest details, the publication of the complete text will not be unwelcome.

Being compelled to relinquish my original intention of adding a complete translation of the text, I have thought it well to lay before my readers—in the form of an Introduction—my views as to the origin of the works which I have undertaken to edit, and as to their historical position in the literature of which they form part.

Both in the Holy Writings, and also in the earliest Buddhist works that we possess, we find the VINAYA systematically compared and contrasted with the DHAMMA; and indeed, where both are mentioned, Dhamma is frequently named first and Vinaya second.[1] This regular system of comparison between Dhamma and Vinaya appears throughout the sacred literature, which, in the earlier period, consisted of two large collections of works (Piṭaka), of which one comprised the Vinaya and the other the Dhamma; and at a later period, consisted of three collections, of which the first was devoted to the Vinaya and the other two to the Dhamma. Of the earlier of these two systems (which possessed a DVIPIṬAKA, but knew nothing of the Tipiṭaka)

[1] Of the numerous examples of this, the citation of a few terms frequently met with, will suffice: yo . . . aññatitthiyapubbo imasmiṃ dhammavinaye âkaṅkhati pabbajjaṃ;—ayaṃ dhammo ayaṃ vinayo idaṃ satthu sâsanaṃ,—dhammadharo vinayadharo mâtikâdharo.—Kassapa says when assembling the Bhikkhus in Râjagaha: dhammañ ca vinayañ ca saṃgâyâma.—A juxtaposition of Dhamma with Vinaya is met with even in the Pâtimokkha (dhammavâdî—vinayavâdî, Minayeff, Prât. p. 5, line 14).—These passages at the same time prove that Dhammavinaya is a Dvandva-compound, and not a Tatpurusha, as M. Feer (Etudes Bouddhiques, p. 203) has assumed.

we get an admirably clear account from the closing chapter of the CULLAVAGGA, which I propose to edit when I have finished the Mahâvagga. This important chapter gives us the earliest known account of the first two great Councils of the Buddhist Church. We learn from it that in the Council of Râjagaha, Kassapa, the President of the Assembly, opened the proceedings for the consecrative settlement of the Holy Texts with these words, "Ye venerable men, let the congregation hear me. If the congregation is ready, I will question Upâli respecting the Vinaya." Whereupon Kassapa questioned Upâli respecting the Vinaya. This being done, he addressed a second speech to the assembly: "Ye venerable men, let the congregation hear me. If the congregation is ready, I will question Ânanda about the Dhamma." Whereupon he questioned Ânanda respecting the five collections (pañca nikâyâ), beginning with the Brahmajâlasutta. Hereby, according to this account, the whole work of the revision of Dhamma and Vinaya is brought to an end. The five Nikâyas are undoubtedly the five well-known collections included in the Suttapiṭaka. These five collections therefore—according to the idea of the age in which this account of the two Councils originated—contained the whole of the Dhamma as taught by Buddha. The series of works which was subsequently called Suttapiṭaka was even at that time well known; the collection of the Abhidhammapiṭaka was either altogether unknown, or was not regarded as canonical or of the same value as the two other Piṭakas; and it was generally supposed that, in the council held after Buddha's death, it had not been admitted by the Theras into the collection of the Dhammavinaya or of the Jinavacana.[1]

The important difference between the more recent Buddhist literature and that of the more ancient period, [1] This term is used in the grammar of Kaccâyana (p. 33, ed. Senart) as denoting the whole of Buddha's discourses.

viz. the transition from the Dvipiṭaka to the Tipiṭaka, becomes more marked if we compare the above account taken from the Cullavagga with an account of the same Council given by Buddhaghosa in his introduction to the commentary on the Dîghanikâya.[1] The two accounts are in most respects similar, but they differ altogether with regard to the extent and division of the sacred texts collected at the first Council. In both we have the report of the revision of the Vinaya, and in both, after this is over, Kassapa addresses the assembly with the words, "If the congregation is ready, I will question Ânanda about the Dhamma." But in the latter account, before the revision of the Dhamma is begun, Kassapa puts the following question to the Theras: "Which of the two collections (piṭaka) shall we proceed with first?" and they answer, "The collection of the Suttanta." This collection, beginning with the Brahmajâla, is then revised: they then pass on to the second part of the Dhamma, namely, the Abhidhamma; and in this manner the revision of the Dhammavinaya is brought to a close.[2]

It would be out of place here to enter into a discussion as to the period to which the more recent Dhamma literature,

[2] A valuable testimony of the earlier existence of a Dvipiṭaka is also contained in the Mahâparinibbânasutta (p. 39): tâni padavyañjanâni sâdhukaṃ uggahetvâ sutte otâretabbâni vinaye sandassetabbâni.—In opposition to such sure proofs, it is of little importance to bring forward passages in the Vinaya which seem to speak in favour of the existence of the Abhidhammapiṭaka. It is required of a teacher that he should be able to instruct his pupil: abhidhamme vinetuṃ abhivinaye vinetuṃ (Mahâvagga, I. 36, 12). This, of course, is only meant to say that his instruction is to be in that which pertains to the Dhamma and Vinaya.—In the Vibhaṅga (in explanation of the 72nd Pâcittiya) one Bhikkhu says to another: iṅgha tvaṃ suttante vâ gâthâyo vâ abhidhammaṃ vâ pariyâpuṇassu, pacchâ vinayaṃ pariyapuṇissasîti. It seems that Gâthâ and Abhidhamma are here meant to represent the different texts comprised in the Khuddakanikâya. Some of these, like the Buddhavaṃsa, or the Dhammapada, are metrical in form, and may be designated Gâthâ. Others of these texts, such as the Paṭisambhidâ, are similar in character to the Abhidhamma, and have, in fact, as Buddhaghosa asserts, been considered by many as belonging to the Abhidhamma. So far as I know, the only passage in the Vinaya which really presupposes the existence of an Abhidhammapiṭaka is one in the Bhikkhunîvibhaṅga (95th Pâcittiya: suttante okâsaṃ kârâpetvâ vinayaṃ vâ abhidhammaṃ vâ pucchati), which words, after all that has otherwise resulted with regard to the posteriority of the Abhidhamma, we can unhesitatingly assume to be an interpolation.

known as the Abhidhamma, belongs; for the purposes of this research it will suffice to state, as indeed we have already seen, that from the very earliest times the whole spiritual teaching of the Master was presented to the Buddhist community in a double form, as the Dhamma and Vinaya; and this dualism, so to speak, is reflected in the literature, in the earliest style of its development, in the two Piṭakas.

The difference between the Dhamma and Vinaya cannot be very clearly defined, and it would be difficult to lay down any very broad line of distinction between the two. Many sections of the Vinaya are met with again in the Dhamma, and not unfrequently are repeated word for word.[1] This, however, is not so much owing to the want of a definite idea regarding the different provinces of the two categories, as to a certain carelessness displayed in the revision of the texts. Many additions were made to the text of the Vinaya, in order to explain the origin and the meaning of the different ecclesiastical ordinances, and various passages from the Dhamma came to be inserted in the Vinayapiṭaka in this way. It is important therefore, in reading the Vinayapiṭaka, to avoid being misled by such additions as to what are the chief and essential contents of this Piṭaka.

Looking at what is essential in the Vinayapiṭaka, we may define it as a collection of rules regulating the outward conduct of the Saṃgha and Bhikkhus.[2] It does not therefore deal with purely ethical questions, except so far as these affect such outward conduct; nor does it deal with outward conduct generally, but only with the outward conduct of the Saṃgha and the Bhikkhus.[3] The Dhamma, on the other hand, includes

[1] For instance, the passages in Mahâvagga, I. 6. 38–46, are also found in the Suttapiṭaka under the title of Anattalakkhaṇasutta, and those in Mahâvagga, VI. 28–30, are almost identical with parts of the Mahâparinibbânasutta. Compare also M. Feer's Etudes Bouddhiques, pp. 202–205.

[2] No direct mention is made in the Vinaya of laymen (upâsaka) associated with the Saṃgha, except that the rules regulate the conduct of the Bhikkhus towards laymen, their reception as Upâsakas, etc.

[3] The discourse on the duty of benevolence, for instance, falls to the Dhamma and not to the Vinaya, since it is not addressed to the Bhikkhus but to laymen.

all that the Vinaya omits. It treats, therefore, of a great variety of subjects, and on this account does not, like the Vinaya, admit of so short and comprehensive a definition.

The doctrine regarding release from suffering, which forms so central an idea in the ancient Buddhist faith,[1] belongs to the province of the Dhamma. But although the Vinaya, according to its strict notion, has not to deal with this doctrine, still the religious ordinances there prescribed continually recognize, and point to its existence. In the Dhamma we have an account of the inward process by which this release is accomplished, whereas the Vinaya treats only of the outward conduct of the life that is still struggling towards it. The Vinaya, which, as we have seen, is generally considered as co-ordinate with the Dhamma, appears, when regarded from this point of view, as a part of the Dhamma: and hence we can understand why it is that, side by side with those numerous passages which place the Dhamma and Vinaya in direct contrast, we may find, in the Buddhist texts, others, which bring the Vinaya within the province of the Dhamma.[2]

It is probable that the contrast as well as the connexion between the two ideas of the Dhamma and Vinaya originated in the earliest times of Buddhism—of this, however, we have no direct proof; but intrinsic evidence clearly points to this fact: and in further support of the same view, we may refer to the relation subsisting between the Dhamma and Vinaya and the Buddhist Trinity of Buddha, Dhamma and Saṃgha. It is immaterial whether we contrast Dhamma and Saṃgha or Dhamma and Vinaya, since Vinaya, as we have already seen, relates only to the Saṃgha.

It is mentioned, together with a series of other doctrinal subjects belonging to the Dhamma, in an enumeration that is frequently found repeated: dânakathâ sîlakathâ, saggakathâ, kâmânaṃ âdînavo, okâro, saṃkileso, nekkhamme ânisaṃso.

[1] In the Cullavagga we have the striking remark: ayaṃ dhammavinayo ekaraso vimuttiraso.

[2] The Cullavagga relates how Upâli delivered the doctrines of the Vinaya to the Bhikkhus; the audience stand while listening to them "dhammagâravena." He who spreads false doctrines concerning the Vinaya is called an adhammavâdî (Mahâvagga, X. 5, 4). King Asoka, in the inscription at Bairât (Corpus Inscr. plate XV.), reckons the vinayasamâkâse among the dhammapaliyâyâni.

It may be objected, perhaps, that this division of Buddha's teaching into two parts presupposes too long a period for its development; this objection would perhaps be well founded, were it not for the probability that much of the preparatory work of Buddhism had been already done for it by the Brahmanical theology,[1] and other sects which preceded it. So that, when the first Buddhist communities made their appearance, the outward religious forms for the new sect were, to a great extent, already fully developed.

Having thus far treated of the relation between the Dhamma and Vinaya, we will now proceed to consider their development, and in doing so we shall first consider the development of the Vinaya.

The origin of the earliest rules or laws laid down by the Buddhist community for the guidance of its members appears to have been connected with those assemblies of the Bhikkhus which met at full and new moon. The custom of holding these meetings seems to be as old as Buddhism itself, or perhaps older, for it may well be that the custom was borrowed from some of those earlier sects which preceded Buddhism, and upon which it was to some extent modelled. At these assemblies the monks of every district met together, and those who had committed offences were obliged to confess them and submit to the prescribed penance. A list of those offences which deserved punishment or some kind of expiation was, at a very early period, drawn up for the use of these confessional meetings. This list was read out to the assembled Bhikkhus, and each one was asked whether he knew himself to be free from the sins there named. This list is called the Pâtimokkha, and is the earliest specimen of Buddhist Vinaya literature that we possess.

[1] It may be said that the Upanishads form the Dhamma, and the Kalpasûtras, Gṛihyasûtras, etc., the Vinaya of the Brahmans.

The opinion here expressed as to the position of the Pâtimokkha in Buddhist literature is, I am well aware, opposed to the views of most Pâli scholars. Mr. Rhys Davids[1] considers the Pâtimokkha of more recent origin than the works which form the great complexus of the Tipiṭaka, and assumes that at the time when the latter works were collected, the Pâtimokkha either did not exist or was of too recent a date to be admitted into the holy writings. I will try to give my reasons for taking an opposite view.

Although we do not find the Pâtimokkha in its entirety and in its original form in the Vinayapiṭaka, yet all its rules and ordinances, separately it may be, but word for word the same, are found there; and indeed the whole Vibhaṅga[2] is nothing more than an extended reading of the Pâtimokkha. We thus learn the occasion upon which each individual ordinance was promulgated by Buddha; then follows the ordinance itself; and then an explanation or illustration of the several terms employed in it. In some cases, also, the rule is further illustrated by a reference to cases which come within the rule, and to others which form exceptions to it.

The question is, therefore, whether the ordinances originally appeared with the explanatory notes as in the Vibhaṅga, the Pâtimokkha being subsequently extracted from it; or whether the Pâtimokkha alone was the older portion, the additional matter of the Vibhaṅga being the work of a subsequent revision.

In dealing with this question, it should, in the first place,

[1] Ancient Coins and Measures of Ceylon, p. 6; Buddhism, p. 163.

[2] Vibhaṅga is the collective name for the two closely connected works which in the MSS. are called Pârâjika and Pâcittiya. The latter titles are not old and may easily lead to mistakes. They are taken from that class of transgressions which are discussed in the beginning of each of the two halves; each work, however, in addition to discussing the one class of transgressions, from which it receives its name, treats of a number of others as well.

be observed, that if we read the ordinances of the Pâtimokkha, without the commentary of the Vibhañga, we find that they constitute one uninterrupted whole;[1] and, moreover, it frequently happens that a rule refers to the one immediately preceding it, in a manner that would be altogether unintelligible if the two had been originally separated by the intervening explanations of the Vibhañga.[2]

So, too, both the nature and effect of the explanations themselves seem conclusively to point to their later origin. Sometimes they extend the application of the rules, at others limit their operation, while occasionally they give directions for preventing their evasion. In some cases also the explanations substitute an entirely new rule, based upon a development of the law which took place since the framing of the rules.

A striking instance of this is seen in the proceedings against those Bhikkhus who by their evil conduct have set a bad example to laymen and their families (kuladûsaka pâpasamâcâra). The following account of these proceedings is given in the Pâtimokkha.[3]

The Bhikkhus are to remonstrate with the accused upon his course of life,[4] and pronounce upon him sentence of banishment from his place of abode.[5] If he resists and accuses the Bhikkhus of prejudice, they are to repeat the sentence; and if he should still persist in his obstinacy, they are to warn him three times to refrain from so doing.[6] If this also proves of no avail, he is guilty of "Saṃghâdisesa," and has to submit to the penalty of the Mânatta; and thereupon, before the assembled congregation, by the cere-

[1] This is not the case with the precepts of Buddha when extracted from the Mahâvagga or Cullavagga.

[2] For example: tassa bhikkhuno, in the 49th Pâcittiya; tathâvâdinâ bhikkhunâ, in the 69th Pâcittiya.

[3] See the last rule of the Terasuddesa (Minayeff, p. 6).

[4] So bhikkhu bhikkhûhi evam assa vacanîyo, etc.

[5] Pakkamat' âyasmâ imamhâ âvâsâ, alan te idha vâsenâ 'ti.

[6] So bhikkhu bhikkhûhi yâvatatiyaṃ samanubhâsitabbo tassa paṭinissaggâya.

mony of the Abbhâna, it is to be shown that the penance has been undergone.

Now the details which the Vibhañga furnishes with regard to this rule of the Pâtimokkha permit of our distinguishing two different stages in the further development of the proceeding. The first of these is represented by the explanations added in the Vibhañga to the text of the rule, the second by the account, prefixed by way of introduction, of some special case that is said to have provoked the making of the rule.

The explanations upon the whole follow the course which the rule itself specifies; but they give more complicated orders respecting the exhortations to be addressed to the persons accused; they prescribe a greater number of repetitions of the exhortations, and cause these at first to be proposed by one Bhikkhu alone, and afterwards in the presence of the assembled congregation.[1]

The picture of the proceedings against the Assajipunabbasukâ bhikkhû, as presented by the account in the Vibhañga, differs much more from the text of the Pâtimokkha. Buddha gives the following precept regarding this proceeding: paṭhamaṃ Assajipunabbasukâ bhikkhû codetabbâ, codetvâ sâretabbâ, sâretvâ âpattiṃ ropetabbâ, âpattiṃ ropetvâ vyattena bhikkhunâ paṭibalena saṃgho ñâpetabbo: suṇâtu me bhante saṃgho. ime Assajipunabbasukâ bhikkhû kuladûsakâ pâpasamâcârâ. . . yadi saṃghassa pattakallaṃ, saṃgho Assajipunabbasukânaṃ bhikkhûnaṃ Kiṭâgirismâ pabbâjaniyakammaṃ kareyya na Assajipunabbasukehi bhikkhûhi Kiṭâgirismiṃ vatthabban' ti, etc. In place of the repeated

[1] The explanations exactly follow the text, as far as the words alan te idha vâsenâ 'ti (Minayeff, p. 6, l. 16); but then they prescribe a second and a third repetition of the same procedure (dutiyam pi vattabbo, tatiyam pi vattabbo), and then go on to say: so bhikkhu saṃghamajjham pi âkaḍḍhitvâ vattabbo: mâyasmâ evam avaca . . . dutiyam pi vattabbo, tatiyam pi vattabbo. Then: so bhikkhu samanubhâsitabbo. The samanubhâsanâ is then described as a ñatticatuttham kammaṃ. As in this passage, the explanations differ from the text in the same way, in all the numerous similar instances where repeated exhortations to a guilty person are concerned.

admonition by the Bhikkhus prescribed in the Pâtimokkha, we find in these statements a peculiar ecclesiastical decree (Saṃghakamma), fulfilled by the Saṃgha, of which the Pâtimokkha knows nothing. The restoration of the penitent culprit then takes place by the revocation (paṭippassaddhi) of the Kamma, not by the ancient ceremonies of the Mânatta and of the Abbhâna. It deserves to be noticed that in the same way as the Pabbâjaniyakamma is not mentioned in the Pâtimokkha, neither is there any mention of the similar proceedings of the Ukkhepaniyakamma, etc., however much occasion for it might appear.[1]

It seems to me unnecessary here to give any further enumeration of instances where the Pâtimokkha proves itself to be the older, as compared with what has been added in the Vibhaṅga. The publication of the works themselves will enable every one to make his own observations and to form his own opinions on this question. I will here merely point to the fact that the other two works included in the Vinaya, the Mâhavagga and the Cullavagga,[2] although they do not stand in the same direct relation to the Pâtimokkha as does the Vibhaṅga, nevertheless distinctly presuppose its existence. The Mahâvagga[3] gives precepts concerning the recital of the Pâtimokkha, which put it beyond a doubt that the name Pâtimokkha refers here to that text which we also possess under the same name. Further, the laws against forbidden acts, scattered through the Mahâvagga and Cullavagga, clearly presuppose the existence of an earlier collection of those prohibitions to which they are the supplement. The difference between such transgressions as were in earlier times (in the Pâtimokkha)

[1] For instance, in the 68th Pâcittiya we should expect to find some mention of the Ukkhepaniyakamma pâpikâya diṭṭhiyâ appaṭinissagge. The text of this Pâcittiya and the story narrated there stand in exactly the same contradiction, as has been proved in the case of the Pabbâjaniyakamma.

[2] The Parivâra, the fifth Book of the Vinayapiṭaka, is of much more recent date, and, in fact, does not come into consideration in questions relating to the history of the origin of the Vinaya.

threatened with penance, and such as were added at a later period (in the Mahâvagga and Cullavagga) to the old list, is also evident from the terminology used for the penance which followed upon a transgression of this kind. The Pâtimokkha in this case uses the expressions Pârâjika, Saṃghâdisesa, Pâcittiya, etc. Now the circle of offences which constitute a Pâcittiya, etc., appeared in later times as completed; if a punishment was to be inflicted for a transgression not specified in the Pâtimokkha, they avoided using the expression Pâcittiya, because, in doing this, they would have made an unauthorized addition of new matter to the ordinances of the Pâtimokkha as fixed of old, which was considered as inadmissible. Hence an offence of this kind, if it was a slight one, was termed Dukkaṭa; if grievous, Thullaccaya. Any direct repetition of what had already been described in the Pâtimokkha was, in general, avoided in the detailed explanations of the Mahâvagga and Cullavagga. If circumstances, nevertheless, made it desirable to give a repetition of this kind, there was in the outward form of such allusions, without any exception, some reference to the corresponding propositions in the Pâtimokkha, as if to something that had already been determined elsewhere.[1]

The proofs given will be sufficient to show that the Pâtimokkha is the earliest literary record of the Buddhist Vinaya. Of the further development of the Vinaya literature from this foundation, the following stages may be recognized.

The first thing done was to make a commentary on the Pâtimokkha. The text of the ancient formulas was furnished, sentence by sentence and word by word, with explanations or a paraphrase. These explanations, when the [1] Compare ukkoṭanakaṃ pâcittiyaṃ, Mahâvagga, IV. 16, 26, with reference to the 63rd Pâcittiya; anâdariye pâcittiyaṃ, Mahâvagga, IV. 17, 7, 8, with reference to the 54th Pâcittiya. At times allusion is made by the formula, yathâdhammo kâretabbo, to the penance prescribed in the Pâtimokkha for a transgression; for instance, Mahâvagga, I. 49, 6, with reference to the 65th Pâcittiya; Mahâvagga, VI. 15, 10, with reference to the 23rd Nissaggiya. There are numerous similar passages.

redaction of the Vinayapiṭaka was subsequently taken in hand, were all admitted into it.[1]

With regard to their form of expression, these explanations did not pretend to come from Buddha himself; there was no admixture of narrative or dialogical elements; it was a simple commentary on the words of the Pâtimokkha, without any ornamentation.[2]

These first two periods in the literary development of the Vinaya were followed by a third, characterized by the greater breadth which it gave to its literary productions. It started again—as could scarcely fail to be the case—from the Pâtimokkha, and in a twofold manner. In the first place, the old material was treated anew, in accordance with the characteristics of the new era. While in earlier times the fundamental laws themselves were arranged briefly and simply, and in the following period were explained and paraphrased in an equally simple manner, the epoch we are now speaking of had a HISTORY to relate about all of them, in many instances long series of histories, in all of which Buddha himself pronounces his decision as to which cases fall within the said regulations and which do not.[3] This is

[1] The greater portion of this commentary on the Pâtimokkha has naturally found its place in the Vibhaṅga in the discussion of the several Sikkhâpada, of which the Pâtimokkha is composed. This commentary is in most distinct contrast to the loosely connected narrative portions which—of all component parts of the Vibhaṅga—were last added to it. Only one part of this ancient commentary on the Pâtimokkha has been placed outside the Vibhaṅga: the explanation of the formulas which introduce the recitation of the Pâtimokkha has been admitted into the Mahâvagga (II. 3), together with these formulas themselves. If this passage —which is distinctly different from the style of description otherwise met with in the Mahâvagga—be compared with the corresponding explanatory passages in the Vibhaṅga, it will at once be perceived that in both passages we have before us portions of the same original work, that this work is older than the Vinayapiṭaka in its present form, and that at the time of the redaction of the Piṭaka the older work was admitted into it.

[2] The small portion of this commentary that is contained in the Mahâvagga (II. 3) furnishes a sufficient proof for these assertions. In some passages of the Vibhaṅga, the address bhikkhave (i.e. "O monks") is added in these explanatory parts, which makes it appear as if Buddha was speaking. The character of the passages in question, however, leaves no doubt that this address has been added at the time of the later revision.

[3] A very clear proof of how the same legal proceedings were represented in the different stages of their development in the three successive elements which constitute the Vibhaṅga (the text of the Pâtimokkha, the commentary and the histories) is furnished by the already discussed ordinances (p. xvii—xix) with regard to the proceedings against the kuladûsaka pâpasamâcâra.

not the only instance in the history of Buddhism, as of history in general, that the further removed, with respect to time, documents, or pretended documents, are, from the events themselves, the more accurate becomes the knowledge they pretend to contain of them. That the histories, which have in this manner been added to the several rules of the Pâtimokkha, have for the most part been invented, and, moreover, invented in an extremely awkward and conventional way, will be perfectly evident to every one who reads a series of them one after the other.

The new version of the Pâtimokkha, enriched with histories, is contained in the first two of the five parts of the Vinayapiṭaka, and bears the title of VIBHAÑGA.

While the Vibhañga stands in the closest relation to the Pâtimokkha, there was a new and wider circle of additions added to that same centre of the Vinaya-discipline—the Pâtimokkha—most probably about the same time in which the Vibhañga originated: an endeavour was made to go beyond the more confined domain of that series of ecclesiastical offences as established of old, to give a coherent picture of the whole legal life of the Saṃgha. They gave a detailed and connected account of the admission into the Saṃgha, of the ceremony of the Uposatha, of the annually recurring observances which were connected with the appearance of the rainy season, etc. The titles of the two works in which these accounts are given are MAHÂVAGGA and CULLAVAGGA, comprehended also under the common title of KHANDHAKA. As in the Vibhañga, here also the outward form was arranged in such a way that in the case of every statute a history was given relative to the occasion upon which Buddha made the said regulation. The whole style of composition of the Mahâvagga and Cullavagga corresponds so exactly with that of the later written parts of the Vibhañga, i.e. the narrative portions, that it may be assumed with certainty that these texts were composed almost contemporaneously.[1] The histories, as a whole, are as undoubtedly pure inventions as those in the Vibhaṅga; this does not, of course, prevent their belonging to the most valuable sources for our knowledge of the life of the ancient Buddhist community. An essential difference between the Vibhaṅga on the one hand, and the Mahâvagga and the Cullavagga on the other, lies in the fact that in the case of the Vibhaṅga the stories were added to an original basis of ecclesiastical regulations that had existed of old, i.e. the Pâtimokkha, whereas in the two other works the ecclesiastical regulations, and the stories given in connexion with these, were composed at one and the same time.

Taking all in all, if, on the one hand, we compare the short precepts of the Pâtimokkha, and, on the other, the stories, the endless pariyâya, the whole of the great apparatus that is brought forward in these Vinaya books, we shall find a very distinct contrast between the two literary epochs reflected in the said works. At the time when these later Vinaya works originated, the Buddhist literature was still far from the literary form of the Mahâvaipulyasûtra, but still a step in advance had been made on the path which subsequently led to it.

Without doubt, a careful investigation of the SUTTAPITAKA would lead to similar results. As in the case of the Vinaya, we should be able to distinguish various strata representing the literary activity of those different periods. As I am too imperfectly acquainted with the materials in question, it is impossible for me, as yet, to make these investigations with the requisite accuracy. I must confine myself here to a few remarks.

[1] In the Mahâvagga or the Cullavagga, where the discussion is of regulations that also occur in the Vibhaṅga, the same stories are related in connexion with them. Thus, for instance, the story of Pilindavaccha and of the King Bimbisâra is given identically in the Mahâvagga (VI. 15) and in the Vibhaṅga (Nissaggiya, 23). The story of the proceedings against the Assajipunabbasukâ bhikkhû occurs in the Vibhaṅga (Saṃghâdis. 13), and also in the first book of the Cullavagga. It has been proved above that this story points to a later form of the disciplinary proceedings in question than was known to the Pâtimokkha and its earliest commentary; it deserves to be noticed that the Cullavagga bears witness to the LATEST form of the procedure.

Generally speaking, the probability is that the fixing of the fundamental doctrines of the Dhamma took place somewhere about the same time as the fixing of the fundamental laws of the Vinaya, that is, the fixing of the Pâtimokkha. If we may reckon the confessional-meetings, at which the Pâtimokkha was read aloud, as one of the most ancient elements in the life of the Buddhist community, then the need for an authentic fixing of the most important doctrines—the recognition of which united the members of the community among one another—can scarcely have been less old.

The earliest form in which these doctrines have been laid down was in all probability not that of the Sutta as we have it. These Sutta, as regards style, show the very greatest resemblance to the narrative portions of the Vinaya; the dogmatic doctrines are not stated directly, but are put into the mouth of the Buddha, and we are told of the occasion upon which he proclaimed them, precisely in the same way as the ecclesiastical prohibitions are manipulated in the Vibhaṅga. Now we have seen that the Vibhaṅga was preceded by an earlier period of Vinaya literature, in which the ecclesiastical ordinances themselves were given with all brevity, without being put into Buddha's mouth, and without being interwoven with any stories. It will not appear too bold a supposition to assume that the literature of the Dhamma developed in a similar manner. The Buddhist community began, in my opinion, with the fixing of the most important doctrines, such as the four Ariyasacca, the twelve Nidâna, etc., without employing any narrative form; if the Bhikkhus, at the time of their assemblies, propounded the Dhamma to one another, their discourses probably consisted of the recital of such dogmatical paragraphs. The same changes in the views and literary tendencies which have led to the composition of the Vibhaṅga, on the foundation of the Pâtimokkha, probably have caused that, as a development of these ancient Dhammapariyâya, the modern Suttanta were produced, in which the doctrines are no longer directly taught, but where the stories are told how Buddha had once propounded them.

Such scholars as have access to the Suttapiṭaka in its full extent, should test these conjectures by the texts themselves, and correct what proves to be erroneous.

We have as yet spoken merely of the relative age of the various parts of the Buddhist Holy Scriptures. In order to fix the date itself of their origin, we must first of all examine the tradition concerning the most important events in the earliest ecclesiastical history of the Buddhists, that of the three COUNCILS.

According to the traditional and widely-spread story, Buddha's discourses were collected and fixed in an authentic form at the first Council, held a few months after the Master's death; this collection of the Holy texts is said to have subsequently been subjected to new revisions at one following Council according to northern accounts,[1] at two Councils according to southern reports. If the tradition could be relied upon in this form, the questions we are engaged upon would in all essential points be settled by it; if it cannot, we must—before casting the statements concerning the Councils entirely overboard—examine what facts may perhaps be found to shine through them. It is possible that these facts might throw some light upon the history of the development of the Buddhist sacred canons, although perhaps in a different way than seemed likely before the test was applied.

[1] We here leave the assembly held under King Kanishka entirely out of the question.

We shall confine our examination, in the first place, to the first and second Councils, concerning which the records of the northern and southern Buddhists essentially agree; the third Council, which is known almost solely to the southern records, we shall speak of afterwards.

Of the accounts referring to the first two Councils, the single section of the Pâli Tipiṭaka itself which treats of these events deserves to be classed first. This is the closing chapter of the Cullavagga already mentioned. As the text of it will be given complete in my edition, I shall here confine myself to stating briefly the contents, in so far as they concern our present inquiry.

The tradition of the Councils takes up the thread of the story where the accounts of the life and work of Buddha, given in the Suttapiṭaka, end. After the death of the Master—so it is related in the Cullavagga—Subhadda, the last disciple converted by Buddha shortly before his death, proclaimed views which threatened the dissolution of the community. "Do not grieve, do not lament," he is said to have said to the believers; "it is well, that we have been relieved of the great Master's presence; we were oppressed by him, when he said: 'this is permitted to you, this is not permitted.' In future, we can do as we like, and not do as we do not like." In opposition to Subhadda—the tradition goes on to relate—there came forward one of the most distinguished and oldest of Buddha's disciples, the great Kassapa, who proposed that five hundred of the most eminent members of the community should assemble at Râjagaha, the royal residence of the ruler of Magadha, in order to collect the Master's precepts in an authentic form. It has already been said above, how, during the seven months' sitting of the assembly, Kassapa, the President, fixed the Vinaya, with the assistance of Upâli, the Dhamma with Ânanda.

This is the story as it has come down to us. What we have here before us is not history, but pure invention, and, moreover, an invention of no very ancient date. Apart from internal reasons that might be adduced to prove this, we are able to prove it by comparing another text which is older than this story, and the author of which cannot yet have known it. I allude to the highly important Sutta, which gives an account of the death of Buddha, and the Pâli text of which has recently been printed by Prof. Childers. This Sutta[1] gives the story—in long passages word for word the same as in the Cullavagga—of the irreverent conduct of Subhadda, which Kassapa opposes by briefly pointing to the true consolation that should support the disciples in their separation from the Master. Then follows the account of the burning of Buddha's corpse, of the distribution of his relics among the various princes and cities, and of the festivals that were instituted in honour of these relics. Everything that the legend of the Council alleges as a motive for and as the background to the story about Kassapa's proposal for holding the Council, is found here altogether, except that there is no allusion to the proposal itself or to the Council. We hear of those speeches of Subhadda, which, according to the later tradition, led Kassapa to make his proposal, but we do not hear anything of the proposal itself. We hear of the great assembly that meets for the distribution of Buddha's relics, in which —according to the later tradition—Kassapa's proposal was agreed to, but we do not hear anything of all these transactions. It may be added: we hear in this same Sutta (pp. 39, 60, 61) of the precepts which Buddha delivered to his followers shortly before his death, concerning doubts and differences of opinion that might arise, among the members of the community, with regard to the Dhamma and the Vinaya, and with regard to the treatment of such cases when he should no longer be with them. If anywhere, we should certainly have expected to find here some allusion to the great authentic depositions of Dhamma and Vinaya after Buddha's death, which, according to the general belief of Buddhists, established a firm standard, according to which such differences could be judged and have been judged through many centuries. There is not the slightest trace of any such allusion to this Council. This silence is as valuable as the most direct testimony: it shows that the author of the Mahâparinibbâna Sutta did not know anything of the first Council.[1]

We may assume, with some probability, that the fact of the second Council does not play an unimportant part among those circumstances which led to the origin of the legends concerning the first Council; such dualisms of the same occurrences are, as is well known, often met with in historical legends. The ideas, out of which the story arose, can scarcely be considered doubtful. Buddha was

[1] I shall here give the passage from the Cullavagga that comes into consideration, in order that it may be compared with the Mahâpar. S. (pp. 67, 68). Kassapa says to the Bhikkhus: tatrâvuso ye te bhikkhû avîtarâgâ appekacce bâhâ paggayha kandanti chinnapapâtam papanti âvaṭṭanti vivaṭṭanti: atikhippam bhagavâ parinibbuto, atikhippam sugato parinibbuto, atikhippam cakkhum loke antarahitan ti. ye pana te bhikkhû vîtarâgâ te satâ sampajânâ adhivâsenti: aniccâ saṃkhârâ tam kut' ettha labbhâ 'ti. atha khv âham âvuso te bhikkhû etad avocam (observe the alteration in the succession of the speeches compared with the Mahâpar. S.): alam âvuso mâ socittha mâ paridevittha, nanv etam âvuso bhagavatâ paṭigacc' eva akkhâtam, sabbeh' eva piyehi manâpehi nânâbhâvo vinâbhâvo aññathâbhâvo, tam kut' ettha âvuso labbhâ yan tam jâtam bhûtam saṃkhatam palokadhammam tam vata mâ palujjîti, n'etam ṭhânam vijjatîti. tena kho pana samayena âvuso Subhaddo nâma buddhapabbajito tassam parisâyam nisinno hoti. atha kho avuso Subhaddo buddhapabbajito te bhikkhû etad avoca: alam âvuso mâ socittha mâ paridevittha, sumuttâ mayam tena mahâsamaṇena, upaddutâ ca mayam homa idam vo kappati idam vo na kappatîti, idâni pana mayam yam icchissâma tam karissâma, yam na icchissâma na tam karissâmâ 'ti, etc.—Thus in the Cullavagga the incident is related by Kassapa at the great assembly of Bhikkhus, and this narrative is followed by the proposal made by him: handa mayam âvuso dhammañ ca vinayañ ca saṃgâyâma, pure adhammo dippati dhammo paṭibâhiyati, etc.—The whole of this story is taken from the Mahâpar.-Sutta; but Subhadda's speech and Kassapa's words of consolation are transposed. The reason of this transposition it is not difficult to understand, and characteristic. In the Mahâpar.-Sutta, the interference of Subhadda is settled by the very fact of so important a person as Mahâkassapa raising his voice. In the Cullavagga it is more appropriate that it should not yet be settled, in order that it may form the basis to Kassapa's proposal. Hence, in this text, Subhadda's words are placed at the end, in order that Kassapa's proposal, which was called forth by them, may be attached to them.

dead; the two other members of the ancient Buddhist trinity, the Doctrine and the Community, were to survive the Master. It can hardly seem strange that, in order to give this continuance the right legendary expression, an authentic settlement of the Doctrine by the Community was invented, and that, for the strict preservation of the chronological continuity, this settlement was supposed to have taken place directly after Buddha's death. To finish the picture of these proceedings, the Council of Vesâli furnished the necessary materials.[1]

The account of the SECOND Council stands in a very different position to the first with regard to its historical authenticity. The northern and southern records correspond in stating that the assembly was occasioned by ten deviations from the strict discipline of the earliest times, having occurred in Vesâlî. The ten points in question are extremely characteristic of the atmosphere in which the Buddhist community lived at the time. It was disputed whether the daily meal, in place of being partaken of at mid-day, might not also be partaken of when the shadows had attained the breadth of two fingers, and so forth. We thus perceive that the grand intellectual movement which we call Buddhism had even at that time lost the spirit of freedom upon which it was founded, and that it had degenerated into monkish ceremoniousness.

It is not my intention here to reproduce the detailed and most instructive account given in the Cullavagga of the course taken in the dispute concerning the ten doctrines; it is an account which, with all its pedantic snatching after trifles, bears the stamp of being in the highest degree trustworthy. The dispute was settled before an assembly of seven hundred of the faithful at Vesâlî; and the ten erroneous doctrines were rejected.

[1] The influence exercised by the tradition of the second Council upon the first also explains why the first is called Vinayasamgîti in the Cullavagga, although it was believed to have had to do just as well with the Dhamma as with the Vinaya. The second Council confined itself wholly to the domain of the Vinaya, and did not occupy itself with the Dhamma in the strict sense of the word.

With this the CULLAVAGGA closes its report of the assembly at Vesâlî. The story assumes quite a different appearance by an addition given to it by the later southern records, with which the northern records correspond in all essential points. The Dîpavaṃsa, for instance, says (5, 26, and following):—

"The eight mighty Theras destroyed the ten false doctrines and dispersed the wicked ones. After they had dispersed the wicked Bhikkhus and put down the false doctrine, the eight powerful Theras selected 700 Arhats in order to purify their own doctrine; selecting the best ones, they made a revision of the Dhamma. In the famous city of Vesâlî, in the Kûṭâgâra hall, this second assembly was brought to a close after a period of eight months."

The difference between the earlier and the later account of the Council held at Vesâlî is of considerable importance for the history of the Buddhist holy literature. According to the later version, we were expected to believe that this Council had revised the whole of the Holy texts; the earlier and undoubtedly authentic account knows nothing about this revision. If the later version were correct, it would be unintelligible that the very detailed earlier version of the acts of this Council should have omitted this main point, and had represented the insignificant disputes concerning the ten propositions as if the Council had been entirely occupied with them. We have already spoken of the influence which the Council of Vesâlî probably exercised upon the legend of the first Council. In the present case, conversely, at a later period, the account of the first Council had, to all appearance, reacted upon the second, and was the cause of the belief that a Dhammasaṃgaha was said to have been instituted by the Yasa, the Revata, and their associates, in the same sense as had formerly been said to have been done by Kassapa.

The result which this investigation furnishes to the question regarding the origin of the collection of the sacred writings, we may state to be this: the first Council is certainly brought by the tradition into connexion with the redaction of this collection, but this tradition contains no historical truth; the tradition of the second Council is historical, but in its authentic form it does not bring this Council into any connexion with the collection of the sacred books. Our inference is thus, for the present, a purely negative one; from the statements concerning the two Councils, nothing is directly gained with regard to the points in question. We shall subsequently have to return to the indirect results that might possibly be obtained; but we must first consider the THIRD Council, held under King DHAMMÂSOKA. As is well known, the tradition[1] in Ceylon concerning it is as follows:—

The acts of favour shown to the Community by Asoka induced a number of heretics to join the Community. For seven years the sacred ceremonies could not be performed, as the presence of these non-believers interfered with them. The King issued a command to the Community, through one of his officers, that the religious ceremonies must be observed; and, as this command was disregarded, the King's minister put several of the Bhikkhus to death with his own hand. The King, horrified at this proceeding, endeavoured to atone for it. The Bhikkhus advised him to invite the aged teacher MOGGALÎPUTTA; the latter came to the capital, preached before the King, and assured him that the minister's crime in no way affected him. Moggalîputta then selected, from among the great host of Bhikkhus who had assembled in the capital, one thousand of them to hold a Council with him. The false doctrines of those who had forced themselves into the Community were denounced; Moggalîputta then, in a treatise called Kathâvatthu, described the dogmatic position held by himself and his followers, and proclaimed it before the Council. This work is still preserved in the collection of the Pâli Abhidhamma.

[1] The tradition is contained in the Dîpavaṃsa, the Mahâvaṃsa, and the Samantapâsâdikâ of Buddhaghosa. In the concluding chapter of the Cullavagga, the first two Councils only are spoken of.

In the domains of northern Buddhism there is but little said concerning the third Council.[1] But it is incorrect to suppose that it was wholly unknown[2] there. That the references made to this Council are but rare may easily be accounted for.

It is well known that the period between the Councils of Vesâlî and Pâṭaliputta is assumed by our records to have been the time of the origin of those schisms which separated the Buddhist fraternity into eighteen different schools. Moggalîputta, to whom is attributed the leading part at the Council of Pâṭaliputta, was not an authority recognized throughout the whole domain of the Buddhist church (the very fact of the eighteen sects excludes such an assumption); he was, in fact, merely the head of one school. The Council, at which Moggalîputta formulated his own opinions, and denounced all views that differed from his own, resulted in a decisive triumph for his party over its adversaries. Thus it is perfectly intelligible that mention is so frequently made of these proceedings in the records of the Sinhalese, who consider themselves as belonging to the school of Moggalîputta, and so rarely, if at all, by the northern Buddhists. The tradition which ascribes

[1] Mr. Beal writes to me: "With respect to the Councils, ALL THE CHINESE VERSIONS OF THE VINAYA PIṬAKA agree in alluding only to two. There is no mention whatever of a Council at Pâṭaliputra." In this the Chinese texts correspond perfectly with the Pâli versions of the Vinaya Piṭaka, which likewise mention only two Councils; but we must beware not to conclude from this that the third Council is a mere invention.

the origin of differences of the schools to the period between the second and third Councils, and the fact that the northern and southern records speak much in the same way of the first two Councils, and not so with regard to the third, mutually confirm and explain each other. As a counterpart to the almost absolute silence in the records of the northern texts concerning Moggalîputta, it may be mentioned that Upagupta, whom the Buddhists of the north regard as the highest ecclesiastical authority under Asoka, is, as far as I know, nowhere mentioned by the Sinhalese.

After what has been said, we must not, from the fact that the northern writers do not allude to the third Council, entertain any suspicion of the Sinhalese historians having wilfully divided the facts belonging to the second Council, and framed two different Councils of them, or of their having referred to King Asoka—in whose reign the second Council was held—as to two different kings of the same name.[1] As little would it be correct to say that the northern writers have described the second and third Councils as one. The two incidents have nothing whatever in common, with the exception of the accidental identity of names of the kings in whose reigns the events occurred; that most of the northern writers knew of or wished to know of but one of these events, is certainly as correct, as it is incorrect to assume that they turned the two into one.

[1] In Hiouen Thsang, at all events, in one passage, there is evidence of his being conscious of the difference between the two Asokas. The great king Dhammâsoka he always calls Wou-yeou, and speaks of him as a well-known person. Now, he at one time says (Mémoires de H. Ths., vol. i. p. 414): "Dans la première centaine d'années qui suivit le Nirvâṇa, il y eut un roi nommé 'O-chou-kia, qui était l'arrière-petit-fils du roi Pin-pi-so-lo (Bimbisâra). Il quitta la ville de la maison du roi (Râjagriha), transféra sa cour à Po-tch'a-li (Pâṭaliputra) et fit construire une seconde enceinte autour de l'ancienne ville." Shortly before and afterwards Dhammâsoka is spoken of under the name of Wou-yeou. This is the only passage where Hiouen Thsang uses the name 'O-chou-kia. It seems undoubted that the author here understood 'O-chou-kia and Wou-yeou to be two different persons.

The Councils of Vesâlî and Pâṭaliputta, respecting which we have here expressed our opinion, are the fixed points in the history of the earlier form of Buddhism. In order to indicate the position occupied by other incidents belonging to this period, we must look for the circumstances which connect them with those primary events.

In the above investigation, we have already spoken of several facts which must be placed in the period between the Council of Vesâlî and that of Pâṭaliputta. This period, first of all, saw the origin of the schisms, and was also the time of the development of the Abhidhamma literature, which was brought to a close by the proclamation of the text of the Kathâvatthu at the Council of Pâṭaliputta.[1] The composition of the closing chapter of the Cullavagga, which contains an account of the first two Councils, is, on the one hand, clearly of later origin than the Assembly at Vesâlî, and, on the other hand, of an earlier date than the origin of the schismatic schools and of the Abhidhamma books, for this identical chapter is met with in the Vinaya of the different schools at a corresponding place, and it does not mention the Abhidhamma among the sacred writings of which it gives a survey intended to be complete.

What, however, is the chronological relation between the origin of the main substance of the Vinaya (i.e. of the whole Piṭaka, with the exception of this story of the Councils, and of the Parivâra) and the Councils of Vesâlî and Pâṭaliputta?

The account of the Councils follows upon the actual closing chapter of the Vinaya, containing the laws for the [1] It is scarcely necessary to remark that the contemporaneous origin of the schisms and of the Abhidhamma is not accidental, but that in it the natural connexion of the events is apparent. The same characteristic signature of that very stage of the development of Buddhism, which first advanced from the simple handing over and receiving of the doctrines, to a systematical dogmatising, shows itself both in the domain of literature in the origin of the Abhidhamma, and in the domain of ecclesiastical life in those disputes which have produced the great schisms.

Bhikkhunîs.[1] It is evident that this account is written as the conclusion or an appendix to the Vinaya, and that, accordingly, the main substance of the Vinaya laws was not composed later. It remains to be considered whether, at the time the closing chapter was composed, the principal part of the work did already exist as a complete whole, or whether the closing chapter and the other portions of the Vinaya were composed at one and the same time. It seems to me that the first of these alternatives possesses by far the greater amount of probability, not to say certainty. And that for two reasons. First we must consider the circumstance that in the closing chapter the redaction of the whole Vinaya is said to have been made immediately after Buddha's death. Now, though this tradition is proved to be untenable, it surely follows from the very fact of its existence—with perfect certainty—that, at the time the story in question was written, the redaction of the Vinaya was not a fact just accomplished or still held in fresh remembrance, and that least of all can it have been a part of the same diaskeuasis which gave rise to the very story that transposes that redaction a hundred years back.

Another point deserving consideration here is the treatment or non-treatment in the Vinaya of those questions which formed the subjects of discussion at the second Council.

No reader of the Vinaya will hesitate to admit that this collection contains not an historical account of what BUDDHA permitted and forbade, but an account of what was regarded as allowable and forbidden at a certain period long after Buddha's time. Now the whole second Council was nothing more than a discussion on the permissibility of certain indulgences, a discussion which excited the attention of the whole community in the highest degree. We may with full assurance infer that if the discussions as to what was permitted and what forbidden, which we have before us in the Vinaya, were established after the time of this Council, it was next to unavoidable that, in appropriate passages, it should be directly stated how the Bhikkhus were to act with regard to the points so hotly disputed at Vesâlî. The materials for comparing the points disputed at Vesâlî with the doctrines of the Vinaya are all in our possession. The account in the Cullavagga concerning the Council even directly mentions, at each of the ten false precepts, where these are said to have been condemned by Buddha, so that we know upon what the ancient fraternity itself based the rejection of the ten heresies. Now we find that the text of the Vinaya, as we have it, does not in any way expressly touch upon most of these points;[1] that, in fact, it does not know of the propositions discussed at Vesâlî. The passages of the Vinaya to which the Cullavagga refers respecting the decision of the ten disputed points contain only general principles, not any express reference to the special subjects of the ten Vatthu. To these main propositions themselves are added—to facilitate the interpretation—fuller details, which touch upon a great number of special cases relating to the various rules; but the cases upon which the controversy at Vesâlî turned are not specified.[2] The texts of the Pârâjika and Pâcittiya—with the unwearied minute acuteness which is characteristic of the Indian mind—collect all the in any way conceivable possibilities that might apply to the propositions to be explained, in order to cut off every doubt as to the sense. Every one who knows the manner in which the discussion proceeds in these texts will not hesitate, with perfect confidence, to draw the conclusion that, at the time when these texts received their present form, nothing was as yet known of the ten Vatthu of the Bhikkhus at Vesâlî. The discussion of the ten propositions is given in the form of an account of the Council at Vesâlî, as an appendix at the end of the Vinaya; this, I think, is the best proof of the fact that when the dispute concerning the ten propositions was being carried on, the Vinaya itself already existed, that IT IS OLDER THAN THE COUNCIL OF VESÂLÎ.

[1] The Bhikkhunîs are constantly spoken of in the Vinaya after the conclusion of the laws relative to the Bhikkhus. In agreement with the fundamental division of the Vinaya into two main parts (Pârâjika Pâcittiya—Mahâvagga Cullavagga), we find the regulations referring to the Bhikkhunîs collected in two passages, in the Bhikkhunîvibhaṅga at the end of the Pâcittiya, and at the end of the Cullavagga before the story of the Councils.

[1] There is only one of these directly mentioned in the Vinaya, the tenth, which is obviously the most important of the disputed points, prohibiting any Bhikkhu from accepting gold or silver.

[2] I shall for the present not give in extenso in proof of this all the passages that come into consideration here; the publication of the complete Vinaya will enable every one to form his own opinion.

Probably, however, not MUCH older. If we fix the date of the composition of the Vinayapiṭaka, as handed down to us, too long BEFORE the Council held at Vesâlî, we shall thereby, first of all, come too close upon Buddha's own day, and it is further opposed by the prophecy of Pâṭaliputta being made the capital of the kingdom of Magadha, as contained in the Vinaya.[1] According to the statement of Hiouen Thsang, King Kâlâsoka, in whose reign the Council of Vesâlî was held, is said to have changed his residence, and removed to Pâṭaliputta; and, indeed, the royal residence had been removed there at the time the Council was being held, if the report in the Mahâvaṃsa (p. 17, l. 4) is correct. The removing of the residence of the Magadha kings to Pâṭaliputta must be anterior to the redaction of the Vinaya Piṭaka as we read it.

We shall now, in conclusion, draw up a list of the successive events in the literary and ecclesiastical history of the Buddhists, belonging to the period we have been discussing.

1. The Genesis of the Pâtimokkha. The earliest beginnings of the Dhamma literature.

[1] Mahâvagga, VI. 28, 8. Compare Mahâparinibb. S., p. 13.

2. The formation of the Commentary on the Pâṭimokkha, which is included in the Vibhaṅga.
3. The Vibhaṅga is compiled; the Mahâvagga and the Cullavagga are composed; origin of the main substance of the Suttanta literature.
4. COUNCIL AT VESÂLÎ.
5. Origin of the legends of the Council at Râjagaha; composition of the closing chapter of the Vinaya.
6. Schisms in the Buddhist community; origin of the Abhidhamma.
7. COUNCIL AT PÂṬALIPUTTA; the Kathâvatthu.

If, as is justified by Asoka's inscriptions, we assume the year 265 B.C. as the approximate date of his coronation, and we calculate 118 years back from this to the Council at Vesâlî—in accordance with the chronological system of the Mahâvaṃsa and Dîpavaṃsa[1]—we shall find the date of this Council to fall somewhere about 383 B.C. From what has been said above, the revision of the Vinaya must have been somewhere before that time, but not much earlier. Hence we shall be right in conjecturing that it was not very far removed from 400 B.C. The error which might possibly arise from the inaccuracy of this calculation cannot at all events be a considerable one.

[1] I agree perfectly with the remarks made by Dr. Bühler respecting the Sinhalese chronology: "The smallness of the period, sixty years of which are besides covered by the reigns of Candragupta and Bindusâra, where Brahmans and Buddhists agree in their figures, makes a considerable deviation from the truth improbable, and for practical purposes the number of years given by the Buddhists may be accepted as a fact." I believe I may be justified in agreeing to this judgment of Dr. Bühler, even though I do not share his opinion that the edicts of Sahasrâm and Rupnâth contain an authentic confirmation of the chronological system of the Sinhalese, which is as old as the time of Asoka himself. The statement in these inscriptions regarding the length of time during which the king who set them up, remained a layman (upâsaka), does not seem to me to have been correctly treated by Dr. Bühler. The inscription of Sahasrâm reads: | | | | | | iyâni savachalâni; the inscription of Rupnâth: sâtirakekâni aḍhiti | ni va[sâ]. Dr. Bühler's transcription of this inscription reads aḍhitisâni; in the drawing in the Corpus Inscriptionum (Vol. I. Pl. XIV.), however, the penultimate is stated to be illegible, and the photo-zincograph in the Indian Antiquary (June, 1877) seems to furnish the reading yâ rather than sâ in the passage in question, and the reading yâ is also confirmed by the Sahasrâm edict. It seems to me, therefore, that the only accredited reading is aḍhitiyâni (or aḍhatiyâni), and this is undoubtedly the same as aḍḍhateyya and aḍḍhatiya of the Pâli and aḍḍhaijja of the Jaina Prâkṛit, which signifies "two and a half." The King, therefore, was not an Upâsaka for thirty-two and a half years and more, but for thirty years less. Dr. Bühler's principal argument in favour of the supposition that the inscriptions were made by Asoka is this: that it is only the long reign of this monarch, of all the kings of the Maurya dynasty, which tallies with the numbers given in the inscriptions. My opinion is that the inscriptions might have been made by any Maurya king, who had reigned for at least about four years; and the Community mentioned might be any one of the numerous sects of that time, and—considering the expression "vivutha"—any other rather than the Buddhist. If the King was nevertheless Asoka, and the Saṃgha the Buddhist, the inscription would not confirm the chronology of the Sinhalese, it would oppose it.

I do not think we shall be overestimating the literary productivity of the Buddhist Saṃgha by considering it possible that, during the first ninety years after Buddha's death, it had produced a literature of this great compass, and one so widely scattered in strata of an earlier and later origin. Let us compare it with the literary productions that emanated from the Socratic school during the seventy-seven years between the death of Socrates and that of Aristotle, or with the works of Kant and the philosophers who followed him, during the fifty years between the publication of the Critic of Pure Reason and the death of Hegel. The period of Indian history of which we are speaking was—this we must bear in mind—on the one hand, most seriously affected by the religio-ascetic thoughts which have created Buddhism; on the other hand, it possessed a perfect mastery of the literary form. It is most probable that other sects had preceded the Buddhists in laying down their ordinances for the community and their dogmatic principles in a literary form. What these sects had accomplished the Buddhists made use of; and, if nowhere else, they at all events found in the texts of the Brâhmaṇa, of the Sûtra and Upanishad, prototypes for the development of a didactic material in a form appropriate for the further transmission to disciples. Fellow-labourers in the work were to be found throughout the whole Jambudîpa, wherever there were Bhikkhus to whom the doctrines of Gotama Buddha had found their way. Hence our opinion of the early origin of the Buddhist texts, based as it is upon external proofs, does not clash, but agrees perfectly with the internal possibility and probability.[1]

We have hitherto endeavoured to describe the history of the development of the Buddhist Vinaya-literature without regard to the DIVISION OF THE SCHOOLS, all of which have their own texts.[2] We pass on to an examination regarding that SCHOOL, the Vinaya-texts of which have been preserved to us in Ceylon, and of its position among the other schools into which the Buddhist church divided itself.

[1] The edict of Bairât has been brought forward to oppose the great age of the Buddhist Holy Scriptures in the form we now have them; to me this seems altogether wrong. King Asoka mentions in that edict a number of texts, the study of which he recommends to the fraternity and to laymen. He intended in no way to draw up a list of all the sayings of Buddha which the King considered as authentic, but to give a selection of those which he held to be specially deserving of study. The fact that only some of the titles mentioned in the inscription have hitherto been met with in the texts cannot cause the slightest hesitation. First of all the Pâli texts have not yet been examined so completely as will be necessary, and then we must remember that the same text was frequently known by several titles. Compare, for instance, the names which Buddha gives at the end of the Brahmajâlasutta (Sept Suttas, p. 57) to this discourse (Atthajâla, Dhammajâla, Brahmajâla, Ditthijâla, Anuttarasamgâmavijaya), or let us ask, who, at a first glance, would recognize the identity of the Pârâjika and Pâcittiya with the Suttavibhañga, or the identity of the Âgamas with the Nikâyas, etc. Thus the "Moneyasuta," to which the inscription alludes, may be identical with the Sâmañña phalasutta, if we must not rather identify it with the little discourse contained in the Tikanipâta of the Añguttara-Nikâya which begins: "Tînîmâni bhikkhave moneyyâni" (see the Apâyavagga; fol. jhai of the Phayre MS.). The "Munigâthâ" most probably are the twelfth Sutta of the Suttanipâta. The "Lâghulovâda," concerning falsehood, which is mentioned in the inscription, is the Ambalatthikarâhulovâda, the sixty-first among the Suttas of the Majjhima-Nikâya. The Vinayasamâkasa (= vinaya-samâkarsha) is, I think, certainly not the Parivâra, as Mr. Davids once supposed. This work, at least to judge from the Pâli version which is the only one I know, is undoubtedly of more recent date than Asoka; besides, on account of its form, which is somewhat like an index, it was of all the Vinaya texts least of all adapted for being studied in wider circles. The expression "substance of the Vinaya" seems to me to apply very well to the Pâtimokkha. The meaning of the title Anâgatabhayâni can be gathered from the Arañâkânâgatabhayasutta of the Añguttaranikâya (given in the Suttasamgaha, MS. Orient. fol. 939, of the Royal Library in Berlin, fol. cam). This Sutta describes how the Bhikkhu, who lives a solitary life in the forests, should have ever before him the dangers that might suddenly put an end to his life—serpents, savage animals, etc. (these are the "fears of the future"), and such thoughts should lead him to exercise all his energies in order to arrive at the goal of his religious strivings.

[2] The opinion of Professor Wassiljew (Der Buddhismus, p. 68 of the German translation), that the Vinaya literature was the same in all the different schools, is, strictly speaking, not correct. It is true, only, so far as has yet been discovered, that the Vinaya of the different schools is based upon the same fundamental redaction, but this original Vinaya has assumed very different forms in the different schools.

Among the historical traditions of the Mahâvihâra in Ceylon,[1] there has been preserved an account of the eighteen sects which arose during the course of the second century after Buddha's death; and we have several other similar accounts from the northern records.[2] The various names in the different reports do not always correspond exactly; not only were different names given to the same school, but in the course of time more than eighteen schools arose, and the various reports selected from among these, first one and then another, in order to produce the number eighteen that had long been regarded as the established number. However, in spite of the lists not agreeing perfectly, we can, with sufficient certainty, discern several large groups of schools that are closely allied among one another.

Which is the school, the texts of which we have before us in the Pâli language? And with which other schools was it most closely connected?

According to the traditions of the Sinhalese, one of the schools possessed a claim to be considered as orthodox, on account of its having held fast to the original tradition of the THERAS (mûlatheravâda); of course the Sinhalese church considers itself as belonging to this party. That the name THERAVÂDÎ was not a mere title of honour which the followers of this school applied to themselves alone, but that their right to it was generally recognized, is evident from the fact that Hiouen Thsang also gives this name ("Chang-tso-pou") to the Sinhalese community.

Now, in my opinion, it can be shown with tolerable certainty that this same school bore another name in addition, that of the VIBHAJJAVÂDÎ (Vibhajyavâdinas). From

[1] The historical portions of the great Aṭṭhakathâ of the Mahâvihâra form the basis not only of the historical statements of Buddhaghosa, but also of the histories Dîpavaṃsa and Mahâvaṃsa. I intend to give a proof of this in my edition of the Dîpavaṃsa.

the reports of the northern Buddhists, more especially those of the Mahâsaṃghikâs and Sammatîyâs,[1] we find, by the side of two other groups of schools[2] which are in close affinity, the following third group: the Sarvâstivâdinas, VIBHAJYAVÂDINAS, Mahîçâsakâs, Dharmaguptakâs, Kâçyapîyâs, Saṃkrântikâs (by the side of the last we also find the Tâmraçâṭîyâs mentioned here, which seem to be identical with or clearly related to them).[3] Now the historical literature of Ceylon corresponding with the above gives the following group: the THERAVÂDÎ, Mahiṃsâsakâ, Sabbatthavâdî, Dhammaguttikâ, Kassapikâ, Saṃkantikâ, Suttavâdî. If those names that are the same on both sides are left out, the result would most probably be the identity of the Theravâdî with the Vibhajyavâdinas.

Now this probability, it seems to me, becomes a certainty by the account in the Mahâvaṃsa concerning the third Council held under King Asoka. Asoka caused large numbers of heterodox Bhikkhus to be expelled from the community, and finally asked the true believers: Which doctrine did Buddha himself proclaim? They answered: He was a VIBHAJJAVÂDÎ. Whereupon the King turned to the Thera Moggalîputta:—

vibhajjavâdî sambuddho hoti bhante 'ti âha so, thero âmâ 'ti etc.[4]

The result seems certain: if the appellation Vibhajjavâdî was known as the name of a school, and the Sinhalese tradition—and moreover in a passage where the point in question was to distinguish the true from the false doctrines—declared the founder of the church to be a Vibhajjavâdî,

[1] Târanâtha, l. c. pp. 271, 272.

[2] In the centre of one of these groups stand the Mahâsaṃghikâs; in that of the other the Vatsîputrîyâs.

[3] Târanâtha, l. c. p. 273.

[4] To the passage quoted above I add the following words I have met with in a subscription given by the Mahâvihâra monks to the third book of the Cullavagga: "âcariyânaṃ vibhajjapadânaṃ (vibhajjavâdînaṃ?) Tambapaṇṇidîpapasâdakânaṃ Mahâvihâravâsînaṃ." See also Minayeff, in his Introduction to the Prâtimoksha, p. ix.

it is clear that the Sinhalese recognized that school as the orthodox one, and reckoned themselves as belonging to it.

A somewhat different statement is given by FA HIAN,[1] who makes the express remark that the Vinaya used in Ceylon belonged to the Mahîçâsakâs. This cannot be correct. For, in the first place, the Sinhalese themselves considered the Mahîçâsakas as one of those sects which had gone off from the true faith; and, secondly, Hiouen Thsang gives the sect which prevailed in Ceylon a different Chinese name to that which he, as a rule, employs for the Mahîçâsakas. Yet this, at least, seems to result from Fah Hian's statement: the Vinaya of the Mahîçâsaka school must be remarkably like the version of the Vinayapiṭaka handed down in Ceylon.[2] Through the kindness of Mr. BEAL I have been enabled to make a beginning on the comparison of the two versions. The task of proving in detail the relation between the texts of the different schools must be reserved for future investigations; it can scarcely be doubted that a knowledge of the original form of the Vinaya will, in this way, be attained with as much certainty as accuracy with regard to detail. It is self-evident that first of all the Chinese translations of the Vinaya-literature of several of the Buddhist schools must be examined in detail. Persons acquainted with the Chinese language, and who have access to these works, will be sure to receive the thanks of all interested in the study of Buddhism for every communication with regard to these important literary documents. Meanwhile, however, it will at all events be of interest to inquirers in this domain to become acquainted at least with the arrangement of the

[1] Beal, Buddhist Pilgrims, p. 165.

[2] It is probably not accidental that the Dîpavaṃsa mentions the Mahiṃsâsakâ first among those schools which branched off from the Theravâda, and that the northern Buddhists also are in the habit of mentioning the Vibhajyavâdinas and the Mahîçâsakâs side by side.

Vinaya of the Mahîçâsaka-school, and to be enabled to compare it with the Pâli Vinaya. I shall, therefore, here communicate the remarks which Mr. Beal has had the kindness to send me relating to the Mahîçâsaka-school, and I shall accompany these with notes, giving the corresponding data relating to the Pâli version.

Mr. Beal writes:

1. "There is no division of the Chinese version of the Buddhist Vinaya corresponding to that you name in the Pâli.[1] In the case of the Mahîsâsakas, the first section of the FIRST DIVISION is called Po-lo-i, i.e. Pârâjika. The second section of the first division includes the 23 (13 ?) Saṃghâdisesa rules. The third section of the first division is called Wou-teng, i.e. the Anityâ dhammâ. The fourth section of the first division is called Shi-sah, which I take to be = Nissaggiyâ. The fifth section of the first division includes the 91 (92 ?) Pâcittiya rules.

2. "The SECOND DIVISION includes eight rules for the Bhikkhunîs, called the eight Pârâjika rules. The remaining sections of this division contain rules for the Bhikkhunîs similar to those for the Bhikkhus.[2]

3. "The THIRD DIVISION contains, 1st, A LIFE OF BUDDHA,[3] 2nd, Rules for ordination, residence during rainy season, etc. This evidently corresponds to the MAHÂVAGGA of the Pâli.

4. "THE FOURTH DIVISION contains, 1st, a section called Mih-tsang, i.e. Adhikaraṇa-samatha, rules for avoiding litigation, and 2nd, rules for holding sessions of priests (Saṃgha-kamma).[4]

5. THE FIFTH DIVISION contains miscellaneous rules, and

[1] This is the division into the five works Pârâjika, etc.

[2] As yet all the data agree exactly with the Pâli Vibhaṅga, except that no mention is here made of the short chapters which in the Pâli redaction come in after the Pâcittiya.

[3] This corresponds with the first chapters of the Pâli Mahâvagga.

[4] This corresponds with the first four Khandhas of the Cullavagga.

evidently agrees with the Pâli Parivâra.[1] Under this last division, we have in Chinese the history of the Councils.

"In order to test the identity of the Pâli and Chinese versions, I will now give an outline of the first division, as it is found in the MAHÎSÂSAKA school.

"The FIRST SECTION commences with a reason why the teaching of former Buddhas had not endured, viz. that like flowers, when not well fastened together, are scattered by the wind, so the teaching of Buddha, if not systematically arranged and bound together in order, would soon be dispersed by the opposition of enemies and heretics.

"Buddha then accepts the invitation of a Brahman, called Pi-lan-jo (Verañja), to partake of hospitality during the three months of wass. The Brahman forgets to fulfil his engagements, being immersed in bodily enjoyments; at the end of the three months Buddha goes to him and reproves him for his neglect.[2]

"Buddha then proceeds with his followers to the neighbourhood of Vaisâli, and here begins an account of the transgressions against the Law meriting expulsion.

1. "The sin of Sudâna Karandaputra,[3] who, having become a disciple, was tempted by his wife to abjure his vows of chastity.

2. "The story of a Bhikkhu[4] and a female monkey.

3. "A story about going to festivals and dances given by non-believers.[5]

[1] More likely this section corresponds with the second half of the Cullavagga, and a section corresponding with the Parivâra is wanting in the Chinese Vinaya. The story of the Councils which Mr. Beal mentions will be found in the Pâli Vinaya, at the end of the Cullavagga.

[2] All this corresponds exactly with the Introduction to the Vibhaṅga; the comparison also of the flowers which are scattered by the wind, is made use of in the Pâli text.

[3] Pâli: Sudinno Kalandaputto.

[4] Tena kho pana samayena aññataro bhikkhu Vesâliyaṃ Mahâvane makkaṭiṃ âmisena upalâpetvâ tassâ methunaṃ dhammaṃ paṭisevati, etc.

[5] I do not find anything exactly corresponding with this in the Pâli text. Perhaps the following is the passage meant: tena kho pana samayena sambahulâ Vesâlikâ Vajjiputtakâ bhikkhû yâvadatthaṃ bhuñjiṃsu, yâvadatthaṃ sûpiṃsu, yâvadatthaṃ pahâyiṃsu, yâvadatthaṃ bhuñjitvâ . . . ayoniso manasikaritvâ . . . methunaṃ dhammaṃ paṭiseviṃsu.

4. "Specific transgressions, and their degree and guilt.

5. "The story of Danaka,[1] a potter's son, whose wooden house having been destroyed by thieves, he built him a large stone house, which Buddha ordered to be pulled down.

6. "The story of a Rishi who was annoyed by the visits of a Nâgarâja. Bodhisatva ordered the Rishi to ask the Nâga for the Mani-gem concealed in his crest, on which the Nâga ceased to come to the Rishi. This story concludes with a gâthâ:

'Men do not like beggars, and they soon learn to hate them,
The Nâgarâja hearing words of begging went away and never returned.'[2]

"The SECOND SECTION of this division is taken up with stories about Devadatta.[3]

"The other sections are occupied with stories relating to the subjects discussed in them, viz. with reference to clothes, medicines, bedding and other matters.

"The SECOND DIVISION, relating to nuns,[4] is occupied by stories and instances of a similar character as those in the first division.

"The THIRD DIVISION is occupied by a life of Buddha, from his election in the time of Dîpaṃkara down to the conversion of Sâriputra and Moggallâna."[5]

So far Mr. Beal's communication in connexion with the Vinaya of the Mahîçâsakâs.

[1] Dhaniyo kumbhakâraputta (second Pârâjika).

[2] This story belongs to the second Saṃghâdisesa dhamma. That the person who advised the Rishi was the Bodhisatva himself is not expressly stated; in fact, it seems that in the earlier texts the stories related there of past times ("bhûtapubbaṃ") were only in few cases connected with Buddha himself, and with the persons surrounding him, whereas this invariably happens in the Jâtaka collection. The verse is as follows:

"na taṃ yâce yassa piyaṃ jigiṃse, videso hoti atiyâcanâya.
nâgo maṇiṃ yâcito brâhmaṇena adassanaṃ ñeva tad ajjhagamâ 'ti."

[3] Similar stories occur in the Pâli text in the discussion of the 10th and 11th Saṃghâdisesa dhamma.

[4] Bhikkhunî-vibhaṅga.

[5] This corresponds with the introductory chapter of the Mahâvagga. The story in it does not begin with an account of Buddha's previous existences, but begins with the time when he attained the dignity of a Buddha. It extends, like the Chinese version, to the conversion of the two Aggasâvaka.

Of the Tibet Vinaya, the Vinaya of the Mahâsarvâstivâdinas, we have the well-known detailed extracts of CSOMA KÖRÖSI.[1] A comparison of the statements of these two scholars relating to the texts that have been examined by them, with the Pâli Vinaya, leads with perfect certainty to the following conclusion:

All of the different versions of the Vinaya are based upon one foundation; the arrangement of the material is the same in all; a large portion of the stories interwoven in the text correspond in all. It has been pointed out above, that of the elements which constitute the Vibhaṅga the narrative portions were added last; the addition of these stories was made at an earlier period than that in which the differences of the various schools arose. Even the story of the first two Councils—which is clearly the part of the Pâli Vinaya last composed, is also met with at the exactly corresponding place in the Vinaya of the Mahîçâsakas, and of the Mahâsarvâstivâdinas.

Hitherto, I have been unable to discover any traces in the Pâli Vinaya that the original text common to ALL the various versions of the Vinaya has here experienced any kind of alterations; and more particularly we find here no kind of interpolations showing special reference to Ceylon.[2] The diction also and the archaic colouring of the language is the same throughout the whole Pâli Vinaya; the easily recognizable and characteristic peculiarities of the later works admitted into the Tipiṭaka, and still more of the Aṭṭhakathâs, are altogether foreign to this Vinaya. Thus it seems to me very possible, and even probable, that the Pâli version represents the

[1] Analysis of the Dulva in the Asiatic Researches, vol. xx. especially p. 45 ff. That the Tibet Vinaya belongs to the Mahâsarvâstivâdinas is stated by Wassiljew (Buddhismus, p. 96).

[2] Of the Sinhalese works, known to me, and which discuss Buddha's first actions after he became a Buddha, not one omits mentioning his attention to Laṅkâ. The Mahâvagga, although it treats of the same portion of Buddha's life, knows nothing of this.

Vinaya in its original form, as it existed before the separation of the schools, and that the claim of the Sinhalese fraternity to possess the true Theravâda is well-founded. With regard to the two other schools, we can perceive the existence of later additions even in the short quotations from them which are all we as yet possess. These additions are by no means altogether unknown to the Sinhalese church, but they have there been placed in the Aṭṭhakathâs, so that the text of the Tipiṭaka, as preserved in Ceylon, has remained free from them.

With regard to the contents and the style of representation, the Pâli version has hitherto shown itself to be the most original, if not the original version. But it may with certainty be maintained that in one respect, in reference to the dialect, it differs from the original text. No one acquainted with the earliest history of Buddhism will entertain any doubt that the fundamental constituent parts of its sacred texts were first fixed in the kingdom of Magadha, and in the Mâgadhî language. It is certain that the Pâli language is not the Mâgadhî language, and it is unnecessary here to repeat the proofs which do not leave the smallest room for doubt.[1] Now, in the Cullavagga it is said that Buddha had decreed that every one should learn the sacred texts in his own language.[2] This story will scarcely induce us to believe that such a decree proceeded from Buddha himself; however, it follows from this story with the greater certainty—what is of more importance for us—that at the time when the holy texts

[1] Compare, E. Kuhn, Beiträge zur Pâli-Grammatik, p. 7. Little as we can believe that in the Pâli we have the Mâgadhî language itself, as little can we assume that the Buddhist texts were originally brought to Ceylon in Mâgadhî, and that there, under the influence of the Sinhalese, the language became changed into its present form, known as the Pâli language; for the ancient Sinhalese language—as we at present know it from inscriptions—agrees with the Mâgadhî in some of those very points which distinguish the Mâgadhî from the Pâli.

of the Buddhists were spread over India, they were certainly not handed over to the different parts of India in the Mâgadhî language, but in the vernacular dialect peculiar to the several districts. It is probable that if the Buddhist doctrines had, at that period, been adopted in Ceylon also, and that the texts also had, at that time, been brought over to Ceylon, the old Sinhalese language would have been the one used there for these texts, in the same way as the various Indian dialects were used throughout India.

The course of events was, in fact, a different one. The Tipiṭaka was transplanted to Ceylon at a time when the tradition of the holy texts had lost the character of elasticity which allowed every one to take Buddha's words, and to adapt them to his own language. A beginning had already been made not only to watch over the substance of the words, but over the very letters themselves—over Nâma, Liñga and Parikkhâra, as is said in the Dîpavaṃsa. Thus Ceylon received the sacred traditions in the language of that part of India from which the Tipiṭaka was brought over to the island, and in this same language —which consequently became the sacred language of the Buddhist community in Ceylon—the Sinhalese continued to propagate the tradition.

This language is the PÂLI. But to what part of India did the Pâli originally belong, and from whence did it spread to Ceylon? There are two paths open for this investigation. By discussing the historical tradition one can inquire from which part of India Ceylon obtained its knowledge of the Buddhist literature; and secondly, on the basis of the ancient inscriptions, we may ask to what geographical limits the grammatical peculiarities are confined which distinguish the Pâli language from the other popular dialects of India? If no error is made in the inquiry, the results obtained from these two paths must agree. Our investigation will take up the first of these paths, and be continually controlled by the results that present themselves on the second of the two.

The tradition of the Sinhalese, we know, connects the conversion of the island to the Buddhist belief with the name of Mahinda (Mahendra), the son of King Asoka. The Mahâvaṃsa[1] gives some details concerning the descent and the birth of Mahinda. When Asoka, as a young prince, left for Ujjenî, in order, at his father's command, to undertake the regency of the country of Avantî, he, on his way thither, and in the city of Cetiya—also called Vidisa—married the daughter of a Seṭṭhi, and in Ujjenî she gave birth to Mahinda. Asoka resided in Ujjenî for ten years after the birth of Mahinda, but upon his father's death he removed to Pâṭaliputta, and undertook the government of the whole kingdom. It is probable—as probable as the whole account itself—that young Mahinda lived in Ujjenî with his father till the latter became king.

On these data, Westergaard,[2] and with him E. Kuhn,[3] have assumed that Mahinda, when he spread the Buddhist doctrines to Ceylon, made use of the language of his native country, and that consequently the Pâli was the dialect of Ujjenî.

This hypothesis seems to me to possess but little probability. For even though we credit the statements of the historical books of the Sinhalese regarding the life of Mahinda, it is little in keeping with these to assume that the Prince made use of the Ujjenî dialect for his religious work. Mahinda joined the Buddhist Saṃgha in his twentieth year, six years after his father's being anointed, ten years after the beginning of his father's reign. It is hardly conceivable that he should have studied the literature of Buddhism in the language of his childhood, at a time when he had evidently for long lived at the royal court in Pataliputta, and that he should not rather have become acquainted with the works in the language of the court, it being, moreover, the language in which Buddha himself originally had taught his people.

Another difficulty presents itself. We are not yet acquainted, by inscriptions, with the Ujjenî dialect itself. But we have a safe support in the inscriptions of Bhilsa, which is identical with Vidisa, the home of Mahinda's mother.[1] A lively intercourse was carried on between the town of Vidisa and the not very distant city of Ujjenî, as we learn from the numerous inscriptions found at Vidisa relating to citizens of Ujjenî. The dialect of the inscriptions of Bhilsa, however, differs in too many essential points from the Pâli for us to regard it as in any way likely that the Pâli language originated in this part of India.

Thus there are difficulties that cannot be overcome as long as we consider the traditions of the Pâli Tipiṭaka as connected with the person of MAHINDA; it is impossible both to identify the Pâli with the language of Mahinda's youth and with the court language of his paternal home.

A fundamental mistake in the investigation seems to me to lie in the fact of their making Mahinda play so decisive a part. In fact, it cannot by any means, with the requisite strictness, be considered as sufficiently attested, that Mahinda brought the sacred texts to Ceylon.

Asoka's own inscriptions tell us that in the reign of this monarch steps were taken to propagate his beneficent maxims in a number of other countries, and also in Ceylon;[1] considering Asoka's well-known position towards Buddhism, it is also very likely that the missionaries who, at his instigation, went to Ceylon, were Buddhists. And hence, in all probability, the stories of the Sinhalese concerning Mahinda may contain some germ of historical truth. This germ, however, has become surrounded by a coating of inventions which render it impossible to place any faith in the traditions of Mahinda. Prince Mahinda himself, as the founder of the Ceylonese Bhikkhusaṃgha, the Princess Saṃghamittâ, his sister, as the foundress of the Bhikkhunîsaṃgha, the stories about bringing over the relics and the Bodhi-branch:—all this looks like a tissue of a little truth and a great deal of fiction, invented for the purpose of possessing a history of the origin of the Buddhist institutions in the island, and to connect it with the most distinguished person conceivable —the great Asoka. The historical legend is fond of poetically exalting ordinary occurrences into great and brilliant actions; we may assume that, in reality, many things were accomplished in a more gradual and less striking manner than such legends make them appear. Whatever we may choose to think about the Buddhist impulses that are said to have reached Ceylon from the court of Asoka, in my opinion the naturalization of the whole great BUDDHIST LITERATURE in the island of Ceylon does not look as if it had been brought about by the sudden appearance of missionaries from the Magadha kingdom, but as if it were the fruit of a period of long and continued intercourse between Ceylon and the adjacent parts of India. It is self-evident that, at all times, there must have been a greater amount of intercourse between Ceylon and the peninsula of the Deccan —more particularly the countries along the shore—than between Ceylon and Hindostan. Those acquainted with the ancient records relating to Ceylon will know of numerous proofs with regard to the relations in which Ceylon stood to the kingdom of Kaliṅga,[1] and in such a case we should scarcely require any express proofs at all. The Kaliṅga country, or one of the adjacent kingdoms of Southern India, seems to me to have the most claim to having been the medium for transplanting the Buddhist literature into Ceylon.

In corroboration of this conjecture, I appeal, in the first place, to the geographical distribution of the Buddhist schools in India, according to the statements of Hiouen Thsang. The followers of the Sthavira school (Chang-tso-pou), which predominated in Ceylon, are not mentioned by the Chinese traveller as met with in those parts of northern India, which have to be regarded as the true seat of ancient Indian civilization.[2] The chief seats of this school—apart from Ceylon—are situated on the eastern shores of India, beginning at the mouths of the Ganges, and southwards, in the dominion of the Kaliṅga and in the country of the Drâviḍa; further, on the west coast in those parts which also stood in connexion with Ceylon, in Bharukaccha and Surâshṭra;[3] in the Malaya kingdom the school is not expressly named, but mention is made of a monastery said to have been founded by Mahinda.[4] It may be added that the same school also, probably, had its seats in the dominion of the Andhra, the neighbours of the Kaliṅga. Buddhaghosa frequently speaks of the views expressed in the Aṭṭhakathâ of the Andhra, so that it is a very likely supposition that the

[2] To this there is but one exception, which is, however, only an apparent one. There was at Gayâ, in the immediate vicinity of the Bodhi-tree, a monastery belonging to the school Chang-tso-pou (H. Ths. iii. p. 487 et seq.), but it had been founded by a Ceylonese king, and always remained in connexion with Ceylon. This monastery is of interest from the fact that in all probability it has played an important part in the life of Buddhaghosa. He was born "bodhimaṇḍa-samîpamhi" (Mahâvaṃsa, p. 250); the place where he received the instigation to travel to Ceylon was most likely this very monastery.

Aṭṭhakathâ of the Andhra referred to the same redaction of the texts to which Buddhaghosa made a commentary.[1]

Perhaps, when we possess a larger number of ancient inscriptions from the kingdoms of the Andhra, Kaliṅga, and neighbouring tribes, we shall with greater certainty be enabled to determine which was the original home of the Pâli language. But even the inscriptions to which I, at present, have access, in my opinion, justify the assertion that the home of the Pâli language must, for better reasons, be looked for more to the south than to the north of the Vindhya mountains. Look at the inscription of the mother of Sâtakaṇṇi,[2] King of the ANDHRA, found at Nâsik, or the important, but unfortunately, as yet, partially unintelligible rock-inscription of Aira Mâhameghavâhana,[3] King of the KALIṄGA, discovered in Khandagiri. It will be found that the differences between the dialect of these inscriptions and the Pâli are not greater than can readily be explained from casualties relating to the different manner in which the texts were handed down on both sides.[4]

What I have said above will, I hope, give a certain probability to my supposition that the version of the Tipiṭaka preserved in Ceylon and its dialect the Pâli were brought to the island from the peninsula of South India, probably from the kingdoms of the Andhra or Kaliṅga. In this way we lose, it is true, a fixed date for this event, such as is given in the story about Mahinda;

[1] This, however, cannot be regarded as certain; the indications given by Minayeff in his Introduction to the Prâtimoksha (p. viii. adn. 11) would lead to a different view.

[2] No. 26 of the inscriptions collected by West (Journ. Roy. As. Soc. Bombay, vol. vii.).

[3] Corpus Inscrip. Plate XVII.

[4] There is an interesting example, by which it can be shown that in one instance at least an apparent disagreement between the orthography of the Pâli and that of the inscriptions did not exist at the time of Kaccâyana, but was introduced into Pâli at a later period; the spelling bb of the Pâli (sabba, etc.), where the inscriptions give v, that is, vv (sava, etc.). Both Kern and Goldschmidt have made use of the spelling bb, in disputing the great age of the Pâli language. Thus it is an important fact that Kaccâyana did not write dibbate, but divvate (vi. 2, 10, p. 236 ed. Senart).

we have no longer any right to regard Asoka's reign as precisely the date of the separation of the northern and southern tradition of the Tipiṭaka. The events which, according to our view of the matter, take the place of Mahinda's journey as a missionary, namely, the school Chang-tso-pou becoming naturalized in Southern India, more especially in the countries on the coasts, and its doctrines spreading to Ceylon, are such as do not admit as yet of any chronological determination. However, our investigations regarding the origin of the Vinaya offer some compensation for the chronological supports that are lost. If the view put forth above is correct—according to which the first four portions of our version of the Vinaya received the fixed form in which we now possess them about a century and a half before the time of Asoka, except as regards the dialect—there can scarcely be any great cause for lamenting the loss of those other chronological data.

It cannot be a matter of indifference to any branch of the inquiries into the development of the ancient Indian mind, whether we can safely assume the origin of a collection of works of such great compass and of such varied substance as the Buddhist Vinaya, to have been a century and a half earlier than the origin of those literary documents which were hitherto believed the oldest of those, the origin of which can be traced to a certain time. May those eminent scholars who have solved many a tough problem in the domain of Pâli and of the Buddhist literature, lend us their assistance in leading the investigations which these observations are desired to excite, to safe conclusions!

Before I conclude, I beg to express my sincere thanks to the Royal Academy of Sciences in Berlin and to the India Office in London, by whose support I have been enabled to publish this work. The India Office Library, the Royal Library in Berlin, and, at the request of the German Imperial Foreign Office, the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris, have, with the utmost kindness, placed at my disposal the manuscripts upon which the edition is based. I beg to express my gratitude also to the high authorities and to the administrators of these libraries.

It ought to be corrected: abhisaṃkhâretvâ, comp. i. 7. 8. —nâge AB, nâgo corrected to nâge C. In § 6 all three MSS. read nâge. The agreement of the two passages makes a correction like nâgena na viheṭhiyati (viheṭhiyissati), highly improbable. I suppose, that nâge is a Mâgadhî nominative, the occurrence of which may easily be accounted for in a legend founded on popular tradition.— 5, pariyâditvâ B.— 6, vihâremu C. —aggisâlâyan ti A. —phâsukâmo va A, ph° ca BC. —vibodhesîti AC. —naṃ AC, taṃ B. —disvâna C. —sumânaso C, sumanaso A, suppasannamanaso B. —agyâgâre B. —vihedhiyatîti C.— 7, hatâ A, hatâ ca C, yâva B. —C inserts kâḷâ after lohitikâ. —kâye A, kâyena B, rûpakâye C.— 16. 1, upasaṃkami AB, upasaṃgami C instead of upasaṃkamiṃsu. —pi nâma mahanto B.— 2, upasaṃkami AC. —pi nâma mahantâ B.— 17. 1, vannânipabhâhi B.— 2, vaṇṇânipabhâhi B.— 18. 1, vannâtipabhâhi B.— 2, vannâtipabhâhi B.— 19. 4, akâsîti AB, akâsiti C.— 20. 1, mahati all three MSS., instead of mahatiṃ (the same in § 2, 4 and 5).— 2, A inserts paṃsukulaṃ before âlambitvâ, in B this word is included in brackets, in C it is omitted. —adhivattâ AB, adhivaṭhâ C (the same in § 5). —C inserts paṃsukulaṃ before âlambitvâ. —parivisajjeyyan ti C. —parivissajjatu ti B.— 4, upanikkhittâ A.— 5, A inserts paṃsukulaṃ before âlambitvâ. —âharahattho AC, arahanto B.— 6, tvaṃ gaccha B.— 9, idaṃ kho pana
